

June 24, 2013

HUFF
POST LOS ANGELES IMPACT

---

Los Angeles Homeowners Take to the Streets to Protest Foreclosure Abuses

Posted: 12/13/2010 2:07 am

---

As the economy continues to hurt working families, and Congress takes its orders from corporate America, many people are asking: where's the progressive protest movement that will galvanize public attention, challenge the undue influence of the Tea Party, and focus public anger on big business?

Throughout American history, progressive protest movements have started with local actions and spread to other places as the word spreads, momentum builds, media pays attention, and politicians wake up.

No issue gets at corporate America's inordinate influence than the epidemic of home foreclosures. In response, a David vs. Goliath battle is developing this holiday season between hard-working families facing foreclosure and banking giants such as Wells Fargo and JP Morgan Chase.

Fed up with Wall Street's stranglehold on our political system, community groups around the country are mounting a protest movement to stop the epidemic of foreclosures. They expect that a wave of protests across the country will help focus public anger, mobilize angry homeowners, force banks to halt the evictions and pressure local, state and national politicians to adopt stronger laws to hold banks accountable for consumer abuses.

For example, in Los Angeles next Thursday, December 16, members of the Alliance of Californians for Community Empowerment (ACCE) -- a statewide community organizing group -- will sponsor a demonstration at a major bank that will include civil disobedience and probably arrests.

The Los Angeles action is part of a burgeoning national movement to reign in the political power of the banking industry -- the corporate sector most responsible for the current recession. Along with ACCE, groups such as National Peoples Action, the PICO national organizing network, and the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) are mobilizing actions demanding that banks change their practices.

"A small group of rich, greedy bankers crashed the economy and got bailed out by tax payers," explained Peggy Mears, a Fontana homeowner and ACCE campaign leader. "Now the banks are making unprecedented profits. At a time of year when banks are distributing outrageous bonuses to their top executives, they are kicking more and more families out of their homes. This has to stop."

Despite record profits -- due in large part to the federal bail-outs -- banks are not only pushing families out of their homes but are also refusing to make loans to businesses to create jobs.

Polls show that there is widespread public anger against Wall Street. Americans generally support strong bank reform measures -- consumer protections, requirements that banks renegotiate mortgages for families facing foreclosure, limits on the size of banks (so that they are not "too big to fail"), and new regulations against Wall Street gambling with default swaps and derivatives.

The shake-out of the American economy has left a handful of large banks at the pinnacle of the American corporate power structure. As a growing number of banks have collapsed and been gobbled up by larger institutions, the top six banks -- Bank of America, Wells Fargo, CitiGroup, JP Morgan Chase, Goldman Sachs, and Morgan Stanley) control 79% of total assets ($9.4 trillion out of $12 trillion).

Those six mega-banks are on pace to pay out $143 billion in bonuses and compensation to their top executives this year, which is higher than any year on record except 2007.

Nationwide, about three million families are facing foreclosure this year and 500,000 families have already been pushed out of their homes. Many of them are innocent victims of fraud, deception, and predatory practices. The largest banks are the biggest culprits, responsible for most of the foreclosures.

Despite the new financial reform bill passed in Congress last summer, and the Obama administration's efforts to encourage banks to renegotiate delinquent mortgages with homeowners (though only a voluntary basis), the financial industry continues to abuse homeowners.

Working class and middle class homeowners are facing holiday lockouts from their homes. In California, over 15,000 families face foreclosure every month.

Thursday's protest in LA is part of what the ACCE Home Defenders League is calling Stand Up for the American Dream Day. Families facing foreclosure and/or eviction over the next month will "move in" to a local bank building accompanied by a broad coalition of supporters from the religious community, labor unions, and community groups. Their goal is to put a human face on the failure of big banks to assist hardworking homeowners that are about to lose their homes over the holidays.

One of these families is headed by William and Esperanza Casco, owners of a small business. They've raised their three children in their Long Beach home of 17 years. When their bank, Washington Mutual, was being acquired by JP Morgan Chase, a paperwork error led to the Cascos being offered a lowered payment that they did not need. One day the Cascos received a notice that they were over $50,000 in arrears, even though they never missed a payment. Two months ago, the bank sold their home. Now the Cascos are now facing the prospect of being evicted over the holidays.

Like many families facing foreclosure, the Cascos did nothing wrong. They have the ability and desire to pay off their loans, and they followed all the rules, but their banks are ignoring them.

Now, many of these families are fighting back. They won't let their homes -- their most important investment and source of security -- be taken because banks are changing the rules or messing up the paperwork.

The six banking giants have ignored growing calls for policy changes. The activists are not only targeting the nation's largest banks, but also pushing for stronger laws to protect consumers.

They want to expand local court programs that require lenders to participate in mediation with homeowners. In California and elsewhere, the program has helped homeowners avoid foreclosure by getting lenders to agree to permanent loan modifications. ACCE is advocating legislation in California to require banks to negotiate with homeowners to modify loans before they can begin foreclosure proceedings. ACCE is also part of a growing national movement demanding that banks reduce mortgage principal for homeowners who are "under water" -- whose mortgages are worth less than their homes' values because of the unprecedented drop in home prices.

The ACCE protest will begin at 11:30 am on Thursday, December 16th. To find out details, e-mail ACCE organizer Peter Kuhns at pkuhns@calorganize.org.

Follow Peter Dreier on Twitter: www.twitter.com/peterdreier

17 people are discussing this article with 49 comments

Comments are closed on this entry.

Highlighted Most Recent Oldest Most Faved

Alessandro Machi

7 3

SUPER USER · 59 Fans · DebtSUSPENSIONrights.blogspot.com

What I don't understand is, I have FIVE Chase Bank Protest blogs, all are now over one year old. I think they land on page one of many google searches. My name is prominently displayed on each blog, along with how to contact me.

Combined, my various blogs get enough hits every day to possibly help spread the word. While the numbers don't approach Huffington Post, they still get hits. Why... Read More

Fave Share 12 Dec 2010 11:51 PM Flag

In reply to: Alessandro Machi

Mr Hankey

3 1

535 Fans · Kucinich / Sanders \(Democratic Socialist\)

We all see that the Tea Party has big money behind them - so they get media attention, but logical progressives have a tougher time getting their message out...I'd assume because there's less money and manipulation for progressives.

I'm a BofA h@ter, and I h@te Chase too. Chase kicked my friend and his family out of their home after meeting they met the terms of their trial mortgage modification.

All of the TBTF banks are g@rbage.

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 8:01 PM Flag

In reply to: Alessandro Machi

jk2001

85 Fans

2

They don't know how to reach out to blogs. They might not even think about doing it.

Contact any group like ACCE and get on their media list.

Are you in a network with other protest bloggers? It would be a good idea - it makes it easier to reach a group of like-minded bloggers at once. You can share community contacts, get on all their media lists, and so forth.

You have to make it easy... Read More

Fave Share 14 Dec 2010 2:40 PM Flag

8 COMMENTS BY 3 PEOPLE

Read Conversation ->

Scott Zwartz

SUPER USER · 447 Fans

2 3

I have nothing good to say about the corrupt banks, but protest groups might do well to protest the corrupt judges who protect these crooks. Google the words Zernick, Connor, Richard Fine together or individually.

Homeowner Zernick brought the massive mortgage frauds to the attention of L.A. County Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Connor in West District (when she had been at 210 W Temple, she... Read More

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 10:05 AM Flag

In reply to: Scott Zwartz

unfoxworthy

218 Fans · We:ScottOlsens,the misfits,out to change the world

2

Scott,
The sad part; so few see this "dark side" of our govt.
Corruption runs rampant in the Judicial branch. More of the "Change we SHOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE to believe in".
My buddy (a lawyer...not to be named) wouldn't go into court without a court reporter..."Keeps the chornyism down to a dull roar between the judges and the big foreclosure mills," he says.
Fanned buddy!

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 12:29 PM Flag

In reply to: Scott Zwartz

IndyFem

SUPER USER · 598 Fans

1

Scott...
The Los Angeles Superior Court is all about "money"....from my experience...it has absolutely NOTHING to do with Justice at all. I learned this the hard way...I don't care how right you are...it makes no difference...the Judges & Commissioners are a disgrace.

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 6:52 PM Flag

Trepasky

SUPER USER · 1,002 Fans · Sanity is neither free nor easy

3

Seems to be a disconnect between the haves and have nots. Why we would choose as a country to not regulate businesses that used 'our investments' to gamble, When they lost the gamble, they had to get more money from 'us' to cover their losses. Now that they are assured a 'support source' they can afford to pay well those that manged the gambling, bonuses and nice salaries. The folks who lost... Read More

Fave Share 14 Dec 2010 6:37 AM Flag

unfoxworthy

218 Fans · We:ScottOlsens,the misfits,out to change the world

2

Thank you for this article, Peter. And as you state, " A battle IS Developing." I'd like to offer my support for ACCE as they prepare to protest for "accountability" and also to: ACCE, NPA, PCIO, and SEIU as well as the local group here in S FL, 4closurefraud.org (and the Foreclosure Hamlet). I am with you all.

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 12:23 PM Flag

commonsense333

SUPER USER · 70 Fans

1

Good. I wish I could participate. Would love to do a protest for this. it's such bs.

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 3:28 PM Flag

OldTulsan

2,740 Fans

1

Banks are above the law...

http://noir.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=newsarchive&sid=asU.b\_fCjHTE
Wachovia's Drug Habit - Bloomberg.com

"...The bank didn't react quickly enough to the prosecutors' requests and failed to hire enough investigators, the U.S. Treasury Department said in March. After a 22-month investigation, the Justice Department on March 12 charged Wachovia with... Read More

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 8:38 PM Flag

Financial Revival Group

0 Fans

1

It is about time that groups start using their existing organizations to fight the banks. The banks already have the money and then they get more from the taxpayers when they want it. They are using their power and influence to con people into continuing to pay on underwater mortgages.

It was the banks that caused the drop in values. Now, by refusing to lend, they are eliminating the... Read More

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 9:29 PM Flag

Inkosi

3,779 Fans · The gods themselves rage against stupidity

1 1

It is about time. You go California. I will join any protest here in South Jersey.
It is about time the people spoke – a mandate if you will (Hear that Boehner).
We the people are fed up with feeding your greedy rich friends.

Fave Share 14 Dec 2010 10:30 AM Flag

In reply to: Inkosi

karen1p

SUPER USER · 834 Fans

Join National WaMu Homeowner's Support Group.

www dot wgroup.ning dot com

We are organizing protests nationwide. Please join.

Fave Share 15 Dec 2010 8:03 PM Flag

runfastandwin

102 Fans

Cramdown will never happen. Ever. Better to focus on what is possible than what isn't.

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 5:53 PM Flag

Kai-HK

27

427 Fans · Don't Share My Wealth! Share My Work Ethic!

Mr. Dreier:

As much as you want to make this about banks lending practices, or the unfairness of bonuses, or how much wealth banks control, or how inept our government is, etc.; one thing stands constant, these people do not own the houses they are being evicted from. They are squatters. It really is that simple

The bulk of the money came from the bank and the control of title/ownership... Read More

Fave Share 13 Dec 2010 11:51 PM Flag

In reply to: Kai-HK

Trepasky

6 2

SUPER USER · 1,002 Fans · Sanity is neither free nor easy

It seems that a lot of folks who are making their payments are also at risk. The value of their property has diminished often as much as 30%. Many folks lost value in their 401k investments. Sure a lot of folks should not have taken out loans they could not afford. If the banks and financial institutions relied on realistic guidelines, those folks would never have been approved. To suggest... Read More

Fave Share 14 Dec 2010 6:44 AM Flag

In reply to: Kai-HK

grampyajjoa

1 2

3 Fans

I agree right after all the banks and Wall St takers who put their hands out start sleeping in the streets where they belong.

Fave Share 14 Dec 2010 9:02 AM Flag

28 COMMENTS BY 8 PEOPLE

Read Conversation →

Load 10 more conversations

1-10 of 12